These would be the verdict of a jury if they would be the verdict of a jury if they would be the prosecutor's aide of the prosecutor's aide of the beard the prosecutor's aide of the prosec My position is this: I believe that it is impossible for any man to know what he is talking about if he has not case? We must bear in mind that the whole American people are a jury, and at stated intervals are called on to register their verdict at the poils. No man should presume to call himself intelligent unless he drops all prejudice and examined a question from all dice and examined a question from all angles. It is easy to follow the crowd; it does not require any independent thinking. How many people do you suppose have accepted Mr. Palmer's word as gospel fact in regard to these deportations? The great majority, I fear. If any man should take the time fear. If any man should take the time to think for himself he would realize if any of these allens were actually trying to overthrow the government by force they would have been quietly arrested and given a trial by jury as our constitution provides. It is signicant that of the three thousand taken in the raids none of them were armed. Furthermore, it would be the act of a in the raids none of them were armed. Furthermore, it would be the act of a fool or madman to imagine that three thousand men could overthrow the United States with its population of over a hundred million. If anyone is interested to know the status of these aliens they should read the letter of resignation sent by Francis Fisher Kane to Attorney General Palmet.

The great fault with most of us is that we are afraid of the unpopular side of a question and in that respect we are moral cowards. It looks as if the prophetic words of Thomas Carlyie would preve true: "Two centuries, hardly less, before democracy go through its disc, most beleful, stages of quackoracy." Although Mr. Williard was stirred to indignation by my previous lotter, at least one man, a prominent business man, whom I have
